HUF

HUF presents its Summer 2021 Collection, a retro-inspired range of apparel and accessories celebrating the brand's roots through the lens of early-Internet aesthetics.

Expanding on themes explored in Spring, the summer collection looks to turn-of-the-millennium skate, streetwear, and digital movements to offer up throwback silhouettes with a modern twist. An off-kilter color palette juxtaposes core tones with bright highlights and acid-washed pops as a nod to underground house and hip-hop. Seasonal motifs include a dreamy summer daisy floral-print spanning all categories, with bold color-blocking and branded stripes providing an elevated touch to 90s heritage cut-and-sew.

Lo-fi tech materials play out across UV-activated color-changing tees and "holoshine" foil-prints, while reflective 3M hits are applied to a camouflage vest, shorts, and hat to refresh tactical military garments. Vintage sportswear is referenced in classic basketball and football jerseys, while OG HUF logos are given the cyber-spin through digital fonts, computer-generated 3D graphics, and inverted hues evoking the Y2K-craze of the early '00s era. Rounding out the season is a capsule collaboration with legendary Japanese pop artist Rockin' Jelly Bean as part of the latest installment of our HUF Artist Series.

Dial-up some HUF Worldwide web nostalgia this Summer.

ARTIST SERIES
FEAT. ROCKIN' JELLY BEAN

This season HUF is pleased to partner with legendary Japanese pop artist Rockin' Jelly Bean for the latest installment of the HUF Artist Series—a seasonal capsule collection in collaboration with our favorite artists.

Rockin' Jelly Bean (RJB) began his career in the early 1990s designing gig flyers, posters, and album covers for local bands in Tokyo. Inspired by underground illustrators such as Ed Roth, Robert Williams, Von Franco, and Robert Crumb, RJB is renowned for his erotically charged low-brow aesthetic, described as "lascivious and wildly imaginative depictions of beautifully nasty and cutely obscene women." After moving to Los Angeles in the late-90s, RJB launched his own merchandise brand, EROSTY POP, and in 2004 opened his first shop, EROSTIKA. Notably, the artist only makes public appearances while flanked by at least two of his 'RJB girls,' and wears a custom luchador mask at all times to hide his identity. Having established an international cult following, RJB's fans continue to collect his work not only for the racy "boobs and butTs," but also for the subliminal messages hidden throughout his work.

The HUF x Rockin' Jelly Bean collection celebrates the artist's singular vision through original artwork featured on an all-over print resort shirt, fleece and tees.
